The undersigned is dealing with a dispute regarding sale of debuttore property created by a deed of dedication. It is settled that neither the provisions of Trust Act nor that of Guardians and Wards Act are applicable in case of private debuttore properties.

In accordance with Indian Law, any property absolutely Hindu Religious or charitable purpose is called debuttore property. It means literally belonging to deity. Manager of the said property is called shebait. But the property vests in the idol.

Latest observation in the case of Smt. Sakuntala Debi Dalmia and Anr. -Vs- Howrah Municipal Corporation & Ors. (W.P. No. 9660 of 2006), is that for transfer of debuttore property, there is no need to obtain permission or leave of the District Judge when the transfer is essential and there is legal necessity for the same.

It was further held that warrant for entering into any transaction on behalf of the deity for sale of debuttore properties can only be raised or questioned by one claiming interest in the property, such as any successor to the office of the shebait or any other person claiming interest in the property. No one else has the right to question the sale of debuttore property if it was for the benefit of the deity.

In the aforesaid view of the matter, undersigned is of the opinion that no permission is required in case of alienation of private debuttore properties by shebait for legal necessity and for the benefit of the deity.
